I want to check the API / Data files. I have 4 API. Don't know which one is attached in the file. I tried with Ã¢â‚¬Å"Solution ExplorerÃ¢â‚¬Â, but that didn't helped me. A: 1) your question states you have a Word file (or maybe a word file was added automatically? or maybe you did not have Word installed), but when you open it with the revision control software, it states the current head revision of the file is different from the head revision of the Word file. I would assume that these two revisions of the file are not related. the head revision of the file will always be the same as the head revision of the source control repo (or code hub in this case) and the head revision of the Word file will be the same as the head revision of the Word file. If we assume the Word file is not related to the repository, then we can discard it. 2) also, the console window has a lot of output from the process run. most of it is the unit test output (if you have all the unit tests from the unit test kits that are listed in the requirements.txt). 3) I would recommend that you create a new question on StackOverflow that covers these. Please do not repost this in an answer because this question should be a new question on StackOverflow (and it should be good enough to be the question on your own). Please see the following information for reference: (minimum, Complete, and Verifiable example) (Not an answer and Not a question) Q: How to add an external module into a react app built with create-react-app I am making use of react-redux and react-router for a small project I am working on and I built the project using create-react-app. The only problem is, if I wish to import a module into my app I end up with one big file (my project's index.js) where I import both my external and my own modules. I would prefer to have the external modules for the sake of clarity/readability and to avoid a huge file. The best 1cdb36666d
