“The technology is incredible and there’s not a game on the market with this level of fidelity,” said Borislav Ivanov, Director, EA SPORTS IGNITE. “We’ve been working closely with the FIFA development team to ensure the physics, animations, ball impact and crowd responses are the most authentic on the market, so we’re confident FIFA 22 will be the most realistic football simulation on the market, period.” “What’s most exciting is how authentic the game feels” said Christoph Hartmann, Executive Producer at EA SPORTS, FIFA Development and Design. “The ability to have motion capture data from the players and use them to change the physics and build the crowd reactions, and know exactly what the players are feeling, is unprecedented.” Using the high-fidelity motion capture data, FIFA players can be both a passive observer and a player involved in a dynamic close or open-play scenario, with more detailed animations, player facial expressions and facial landmark tracking used for improved face scanning. The new HypeMotion technology is implemented in two key areas: Player animation. Player animations are also more detailed with improved animation rig, refined animation data, more animation states, improved limb rigging and more. Crowd behavior. Crowd animations are also more detailed with improved crowd behavior, added crowd behaviour states, advanced crowd design and more. EA SPORTS HypeMotion FIFA – First Look
