Retinitis pigmentosa (RP) is an inherited eye disease that affects the neural retina and leads to progressive vision loss, although its precise molecular mechanisms remain unclear. The RP 1 (rp1) mouse, a classic model for autosomal recessive RP, has been used to study this disease. However, in our study, we identified a novel phenotype, non-responsiveness to light stimulation, in rp1 mice. In contrast to wild-type mice, rp1 mice failed to react to light stimulation and did not show any evidence of horizontal and vertical optokinetic responses, even when their eyes were stimulated with a laser beam. On the basis of the present findings, we propose that, even though the rp1 mutation does not cause abnormal retinal functions such as photoreceptor degeneration, abnormal electricalphysiological responses and non-responsiveness to light stimulation may be another important phenotype in this mouse model."He had an incomplete foundation and didn't have the strength of foundation," Williams told ESPN. "He couldn't make the progress he wanted to, and we have to get him on the map." Williams added that he would use Martellus Bennett, who was drafted by the New England Patriots before going to the Chicago Bears and is on the team's roster now, as a potential replacement. When asked if Martellus Bennett would be a good fit for the Steelers, Williams said, "He's a man. He's going to be a perfect addition for us. I think he'll be a great addition and somebody we can count on. He's a very dependable guy, and he's going to be a great addition to our team."Q: How to deploy a project in VSTS I have developed a WPF and I want to deploy it in VSTS 2013 in order to
