The number of CD34+ and megakaryocyte (MK) progenitor cells (CPM and Mpl+) was studied in the peripheral blood (PB) of breast-cancer patients to assess their ability to proliferate and maintain their quality after cryopreservation. CPM and Mpl+ progenitors were identified by immunofluorescence staining. Cell proliferation was studied using the bromodeoxyuridine (BrdU) method. In addition, a series of cytokines was assayed on day 6 of culture of the cryopreserved CD34+ cells to detect any potential alteration in the concentration of stem cell factors.
