The present disclosure relates to a monitor system, a monitoring method, and a transmission medium. In a conventional monitor system (for example, a monitoring system that collects information on air-conditioning equipment from a plurality of sensor devices (for example, air-conditioning devices), presents the collected information, and transmits the information to a monitor system at a remote place to which a monitor device such as a personal computer is connected, or the like), a function that has been realized by connecting a monitor device to a plurality of sensor devices is called a “monitor function of sensor devices”. There is a method that performs this function on the basis of such a configuration as described in Japanese Laid-open Patent Publication No. 2012-22033.1.

Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to an electronic apparatus. More particularly, the invention relates to a notebook-type electronic apparatus, such as a personal computer.

2. Description of the Related Art In a notebook-type personal computer (hereinafter referred to simply as a notebook PC), an HDD (Hard Disk Drive) is incorporated in the main unit (hereinafter referred to simply as a main unit) to store data necessary for operation of the PC. The HDD serves not only to write and read data to and from the memory, but also to transfer data between the main unit and a display unit and a printer. When the PC is powered off or the main unit is turned off, data stored in the HDD is also lost. One conventional technique of storing data in the HDD (data preservation in case the main unit is turned off)
