- Upcoming major update (every 2 days) (every 2 days) - 2 distinct play-modes (classic vs survival) (4 players in classic and four players in survival) - Hardware support (recently updated to support Xbox One / PS4) (recent release on Feb 2017) - Action oriented (survival) - Setting based (classic) - Horror-based (same setting, but different genre) - Early-Access While there are certain assumptions in this game, it is ultimately up to the player's interpretation of the setting, and ability to adapt to their environment. - Diverse game play options (classic & survival) - Online leaderboards - 2 distinct play modes - Optional Coop versus game " Purchaser Age restriction required (15 years old). " Limited time offer. " - Please note that the game was in constant updates and improvements (every 2 days) with community, participate to it! A: You are an adventurer living in a world not unlike Minecraft. The exterior looks like a deserted manufacturing facility, and all that remains are computers and other electrical equipment. You appear to be the only survivor. Somehow you've managed to keep running and gathered a collection of electronic devices for use in this world. The dungeon, for lack of a better word, is divided into two sections. The first is a lab. In this area you will find the generators, electrical equipment, and storage for medical supplies. These are all the things that you will need to make the first very, very primitive flashlight. You will need to make the light if you want to save yourself from the various monsters and creatures that lurk in the darkness. Just remember that the batteries that power the flashlight will run out eventually and you'll be running around in the dark with an invisible flashlight. The other section is what looks like a lab with various animals that have escaped from the zoo you'd expect to find. These are, essentially, regular pets you'd find in most houses back home. You can remove the animals with a laser or a concussion grenade. A well-placed concussion grenade may stun the monkey or trigger the machine-gun of the large ferret. There are two different cats: a lioness and a short-faced cat. A lioness is a powerful beast but an incapacitated one. A short-faced cat, on the other hand, is a very deadly beast but a bit fragile. The final beast cathedral attack: Sothel seizes from Islamists Published duration 17 June 2019 image copyright AFP image caption Bishop Silvia Costa (r) is reportedly among those who were held hostage in the cathedral Police say they have overpowered an armed gang that attacked an Angolan and held scores of people hostage. At least 15 people were shot dead in the attack in Luanda, capital of oil-rich Angola. The deaths took place as a group of around 500 people gathered to demand justice in the ongoing trial of a former member of President Joao Lourenco's ruling a spokesman from the Union for the Total Independence of Angola party said. The insurgency group said it was responsible for the attack. But during the attack, "armed individuals intervened using automatic weapons and grenades," the Angolan National Police Force (PANFA) said. The ers remained inside the Cathedral of St Augustine after the incident, although church officials had evacuated its grounds. Police say several members of the group emerged from the cathedral, before the rest ran off into nearby Jardim da Luanda. Two other bodies were found during a of the site. image copyright AFP image caption Government ministers attended t's new in Terror Lab:

Escapes On Deadly Flyover A popular game in Nigeria involves a group of men following a van through a city and trying to find out if the driver will remain unharmed. It's played mostly by young people and makes for one of the most dangerous drives in the country. Many of the game's casualties are in Lagos, Nigeria's commercial capital. The numbers of crashes are rising as the city grows and more roads are built. Some move quickly, and others are put together to meet administration rules, like a 6,000-foot leg that leads to a "sanctioned" flyover. There are a lot of these in Nigeria, especially around urban centers, and as more people use them, they're becoming more dangerous. It's a type of road called a flyover or tierra, provided either by the city or someone else, they're often a route to reach the highway, and the most dangerous parts are where passengers get out. Just before Christmas of 2014, a man named Dauda is driving his fiancée on a nearly 150-foot flyover leading to an under construction highway near Lagos central market. Dauda's van wasn't traveling fast, maybe 30 or 35 miles per hour. "All of a sudden, within a matter of seconds, my engine started to make noise," Dauda told GlobalPost. "I could feel something was wrong. I could feel that my engine was not working. I started shouting. I shouted out. I'm losing strength. What am I supposed to do? Am I going to die?" His fiancée later told police Dauda had become disoriented, blacked out and had lost control of the car. The impact was hard enough that his fiancée's door stayed closed. Dauda has an accident report that says a car passing by on the flyover hit his windshield. He says he was thrown from the vehicle, his face and hand crushed against a concrete wall. His foot was broken, and his money had been lost. "The hospital staff gave me intravenous antibiotics and painkillers and that was the end of it," he said. "I felt I was lucky. They did everything for me. I took that as a blessing in disguise. I lost my right foot but I
