US senators introduce bill to stop Chinese tech ZTE spying

Four U.S. senators have introduced a bill to stop Chinese tech giant ZTE, which recently received a reprieve from the Trump administration to resume business, from spying on Americans.

“My bill will provide a lasting solution to this problem by stopping ZTE from facilitating exports of U.S. technology to a sanctioned nation,” Sen. Chris Van Hollen (D-MD) said in a statement. Rep. Zoe Lofgren (D-CA) Lofgren is not alone in her belief that ZTE represents a threat to the U.S. The Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation released a report that accused ZTE of conspiring with the Chinese government to steal U.S. trade secrets. Van Hollen is planning to introduce this bill on November 4th, the same day a Senate subcommittee is planning to hold a hearing on the original bill, introduced in May by Sen. Marco Rubio (R-FL).

Featured to sell for $29.99 on Steam, Exile Ascendant is a new action RPG from Ubisoft that has some extra special features that aren't common to most games out on the market. The game has to be played online for that. I Am Legend came out a few years ago, and it was an interesting title, but that's because it was based on a really cool idea, just like the 2012 game I Am Alive (you can read about it right here) is based on. The idea of this is similar, so this game looks like it might be worth checking out, though it's made with the Unreal Engine (unlike I Am Alive), as well as several of the art assets being made with the Universal Soldier model kit! The demo featured for the game can be found over on Desura. It's a cool little game. One of the questions that I have with it is, how well does it play? I still remember playing Battle Realms: Frontline, and that was a game that I felt came out of nowhere. I Am Legend is being made by The Astronauts, who also made Borderlands, and that game is one of my favorites. I think I have to play this to find out. I Am Legend is now out for Linux, and is on sale until February 15th in a Steam promotion. You can grab it over on Steam for $14.99 or less. It will also be on GOG for a similar price.
