A bench of the Bombay High Court has once again allowed a 31-year-old woman to live independently, but with her own helper. Justice Subhash Reddy agreed with the Bombay High Court ruling that despite the woman's marriage, she is entitled to live independently. In a landmark judgement delivered on 14 February this year, the Bombay High Court ruled that though the woman could not enter the matrimonial home on her own, she was entitled to live separately. In order to curb domestic violence, it also made conditions for the woman's stay in the man's house after separation. In a bench of Justice P B Sawant and Justice Revati Mohite Dere on Monday reviewed the arguments of the woman's husband, who was challenging the independent living order. The court agreed with the woman's petition to live in her own house after a six-year-old separation order passed by a family court in 2006, and
