Guns blazing in a world of destruction! Fight for your survival and prove yourself the strongest in this new online 1v1 duel of supremacy, a fast-paced shooter in the tradition of the best retro shooters. In A Clown Car of Blood, you fight the enemies that will come after you! As you progress through the game, you gain more and more powerful weapons. Your arsenal includes shotguns, rifles, and even saws and meat-flippers. Pump those bullets and break those bones! Join thousands of players around the world competing for the top score! Want more? Check out my first game, Son of Guns, on Facebook: I like to use the term "masterpiece" to describe games that would be near impossible to make with conventional development tools. I created CounterSpy back in 2012 as a way to celebrate that goal, and I'm now happy to say that the game has finally been released! It's been a long time coming. The idea for the game was birthed from a personal frustration and curiosity. Game development as a whole is thirsty for new experiences. Those who are close to the scene are lucky enough to be in a position to try new things. I decided to get my hands dirty and make my own experience, something I couldn't learn or experience anywhere else. Perhaps that experience was one of the things that needed to happen. Everything I ever wanted to do as a game developer was done with CounterSpy. I wanted to explore the indie community, grow a community, share my experience, and share my code. I wanted to see how far you could take a game. How many game designers could work together? How could you use emergent mechanics to bring things to life? So I quit my job, quit school, quit my entire life and made a game. I worked day and night until we reached our goal - it was the best decision I ever made. It's been almost two years since the game has been released. Why stop there? We can always do better! That's what I thought. I wouldn't be content if I didn't make more. I just couldn't stop until CounterSpy became something else. I started to use my game as a vehicle to explore the features of more powerful development tools. I started my own Indie Game Academy to train new game designers. I've found an amazing group of mentors who inspire c9d1549cdd

What's new in Kingdom Of Heroes:

Welcome to The Graveyard of Dreams, the twenty-fifth episode of the recurring mini-dungeon series. We're going for a recount, for the fifth time--this is just the 50% print. On with the adventure! Buster thought the giant, wreathed in smoke, was a statue, until he realized how cold it was. Frigid enough that when he placed his hand into the cloud he could feel his own body against the ice. That's when he decided he did not want to stick around any longer. He wanted to retreat, to find a fire somewhere and warm himself. He turned back towards the gate and resumed his search for the exit. In this place he had heard stories, that the dead awaited those who dared venture here, that they didn't just find themselves awaiting. No, they waited for you, they were old friends. Yet he hadn't been moved by the touch of any that walked here; with the notable exception of a girl, or his beloved face. He strode aimlessly, turning his head from side to side, looking to see if he'd find anything at all that indicated he was getting close to an exit. A moment passed, and he looked over his shoulder again. When he looked back a new figure stood in his path. When its head turned toward him, he saw the exposed gizzard of one of the creatures that looked like it could be a snake and the other creature was wearing what appeared to be a cowboy hat. The two creatures from the shadows announced themselves: "I'm the Abusive Headless Multiple Possession Bandit, and this is not a trap!" He turned around, and was vaguely aware of a golem...or something like that...in the wall; he wasn't paying attention to the details of the place. It mouthed something to him, some thank you, some hope, and then the Abusive Headless Multiple Possession Bandit pointed one of its own knobby fingers at him and summoned a cloud of thick, choking smoke. All it did was close and envelope Buster until he wasn't breathable. He yelled through the small space. "I'm not waiting around for you!" The game had told him these creatures were very elusive. They couldn't give chase unless they were summoned. Now they were chasing him. Not only that, he realized, he was going to slowly be out of gas, because no one else on his side of
