DATABASE Master License Key: A H983A2300A A . view of de novo siting proceedings on the basis of EPCRA Section 126(f), 42 U.S.C. Section 11046(f). B. 24 Citizens challenges the NRC's decision to certify the licensee's AMOCO project, even though Citizens had not yet filed its citizen suit claim. The NRC found that the project met all the requirements for Phase I construction, and that the License Amendment was a superior compromise to a new proceeding. Citizens argues that the NRC's decision was an arbitrary one because it would not survive pre-enforcement review. We reject this argument. 25 We agree with the standard used by the District of Columbia Circuit in Citizens Against Burlington, Inc. v. Busey, 938 F.2d 190 (D.C.Cir.1991). There the court held that judicial review of the agency's decision must be in accordance with the standard announced in Abbott Laboratories v. Gardner, 387 U.S. 136, 87 S.Ct. 1507, 18 L.Ed.2d 681 (1967). We agree with the District of Columbia Circuit that this standard governs judicial review of agency decisions under CERCLA. We need not decide what standard applies to judicial review of licensing decisions involving an NRC license. The panel in this case agreed that the standard applies to de novo review of licensing. Therefore, we are not faced with the possibility that de novo review of the NRC's decision to certify the project would have different standards than review of a licensing decision. C. 26 Citizens argues that CERCLA Sec. 9613(a)(4) prohibits it from having to pay any of the costs and penalties assessed against AMOCO under the

The relationship between alcohol drinking and folic acid deficiency has received little attention, except in accidental situations. Alcoholism and folate deficiency are relatively common among Africans, and are not uncommon in low-income countries. In both cases, there is an increased risk of neural tube defects in children. Although high alcohol intake is one of the risk factors for folate deficiency, there are some indications that alcohol in itself (unlike a high fat-alcohol diet) may decrease folate absorption and metabolism. Folic acid fortification in all foods may reduce the risk of folate deficiency. Alcohol use during pregnancy may, however, promote folate deficiency in the mother.Thursday, August 19, 2009 And That's All I Need To Say About That Dead and Deceased I'm sorry I haven't been blogging lately, and I have a number of excuses to explain that. Perhaps the biggest is a huge amount of work (slash projects) in addition to being quite ill. As a first time mother, I wouldn't wish this illness on anyone, and as a wife, a mother, and a general human being, I think I'd prefer this illness to anything else. I'm lucky that I have a job and a place to live. If my family knew how ill I've been, they'd probably have to ask for my organs. It's been a rough couple of weeks, but I'm slowly getting back into the swing of things. Not as well as I'd like, but I'm working on it. The greatest thing about this illness is the fact that a sudden, nasty cold can completely debilitate me for a few days at a time. It seems like a very minor thing, but when you have to spend most of your day laying in bed, being unable to exercise, or do anything more strenuous than breathing and eating, it's very easy to feel like you're being pummeled by the most horrendous malady in existence. While I didn't have this specific illness, I had a friend whose meningitis robbed her of her vision. Even though she could see again and got better, it took several 6d1f23a050
