I'm trying to implement a function that will check to see if some user-input parameter, a bytes object, is a valid file-path by first checking that it contains at least one path segment (I'm using Python 3, so bytes.split() is also bytes. Here's the code: valid_filename = valid_fn(filename) # filename is a byte object valid_filepath = False # Check for path segment at all for segment in filename.split(): # Check to see if path segment is a directory if os.path.isdir(segment): break # Check to see if path segment is a file if os.path.isfile(segment): valid_filepath = True I get the error message TypeError: invalid_fn() f988f36e3a
